Endowment Fund Trust
for Preservation of the Heritage of Sindh

The Endowment Fund Trust consisting of 12 eminent members from the private sector and three ex-officio government members.It was established in 2007 by the Government of Sindh and is headed by Mr. Jahangir Siddiqui with Hameed Haroon as its Managing Trustee.

The mission of the Trust is to sensitise the public and instill a sense of awareness and social responsibility towards preserving Sindh's heritage and to protect, document, restore and conserve the natural, built and living heritage by undertaking necessary action and measures for developing skills through its programmes. Its programmes promote architectural works, paintings, visual arts and crafts, archaeological structures, works of man, music, dance, narration, ethnological movable and immoveable assets of artistic and historical relevance to Sindh's Cultural Heritage.

The Trust supports ventures significant to the heritage of Sindh by providing technical, financial and intellectual assistance.

All thanks and praise to Allah for creating opportunities, through people and all other means that have been instrumental in accomplishment of this work from the stages of its inception to the final product. The realization of this research publication has been possible through support and co-operation of many, to whom I extend my sincerest gratitude.

I would like to thank the Board of Trustees of the Endowment Fund Trust for Preservation of Heritage in Sindh (SEFT), particularly Mr. A. Hameed Akhund, Secretary SEFT, for recognizing the importance of disseminating research outcomes and providing financial support for publication of this inventory monograph on 'Shikarpoor's Heritage Properties' and the support to push for official adoption of these inventories by the Department of Culture, Government of Sindh, as protected sites under the Sindh Cultural Heritage Preservation Act 1994. The gazette notification for enlistment of the 1203 properties included in this document was published in newspapers on 21st March 2012 giving hope that the long term objectives of this compilation will be achieved and the historic fabric of this important and unique town will be safeguarded as an inheritance of the past and a legacy for the future generations to cherish.

This inventory documentation is a by-product of my PhD research sponsored by the N.E.D. University of Engineering and Technology, through the Higher Education Commission of Pakistan's 'Faculty Development Grant', without which undertaking this work would have been impossible. I would particularly like to thank the higher administrative authorities at N.E.D. University for their co-operation; especially the Vice Chancellor Engr. Abul Kalam, for the support and encouragement extended throughout my research. My sincere gratitude to the Chairman, Department of Architecture and Planning, Prof. Dr. Noman Ahmed, for his support, guidance and valuable advice at all stages of my work. Thanks are also due towards my colleagues, friends and peers at DAP-NED, for their supportive endeavours to uplift my occasional dip in spirits. Special thanks to my field team/ colleagues from the Heritage Cell without whose dedicated support this work would have been impossible to compile: Ar. Tahira Shoukat and Ar. Mahesh Kumar Jewani for their enthusiastic and undeterred hard work during the first field visits undertaken in November - December 2007; and Ar. Tania Ali Soomro, Ar. Wajeeha Laiq, Irfan Ali Syed, and Mohammad Ali Qadri for their support during verification re-survey in December 2010 – January 2011 and March 2011. Generally the entire team presently working for the Heritage Cell – DAPNED deserves a mention for their various contributions and support from time to time: Ar. Ayesha Agha Shah, Ar. Wajeeha Laiq, Ar. Tania Soomro, Mohammad Kashif, Anila Rahim and Farah. I would also like to extend thanks to my students and assistants who have, at various stages of the work, been involved with data entry and AutoCAD drawings: Mohammad Faizan Fazal, Durre Taiba, Sarah Niazi, Erum Gulzar, Kamran Baig, Mohammad Kashif, Anila Rahim and Samina Kamran. Foreword

I am happy to be writing a preface to this inventory of Shikarpur's historic places produced by Prof. Dr. Anila Naeem and being published by the Endowment Fund Trust for Preservation of Heritage in Sindh (SEFT).

Shikarpur has remained an important trade centre because of its location, and developed as a hub on major land trade route linking Central Asia to the sub-continent and China. Though Sindh had remained an essential part in the region since late 15th Century, it was during the Durrani Afghan Period that Shikarpur became an important land based financial centre. Sindhi merchants having established colonies all over Asia and Africa, kept close links with Shikarpur and added to its prosperity and civic opulence. Major development of the town took place during this period. The Indus River after entering Sindh near about Shikarpur drops down to sea level rendering the subsoil water in the region brackish. However, Shikarpur's geological placement is like a bowl where the Indus water percolates giving it an additional advantage of having sweet water underground reservoir. Shikarpur town developed as a main merchant network centre with a distinctive habitat and architecture. I recall having seen four mud forts at the entry and exit routes of Shikarpur. I was further informed that many forts had crumbled and disintegrated for want of maintenance.

Prior to partition majority of the population of towns in Sindh was Hindus as they were mainly traders or shopkeepers. Muslims were either landowners or peasants who lived around their agricultural holdings. After 1857, the British encouraged the Hindu merchants to focus on trading world over. One would find Sindhi merchant colonies in major trading centres all over the world.

The Shikarpur merchants specially the Hindu community looked after their trading interests and remained abroad but made it a point to visit home to spend atleast three months with their families. They invested in the development and beautification of the town. The Sindh canal that flows on the outskirts of Shikarpur had brick steps running all along its bank and established large beautiful houses, with proper swimming decks. Majority of these houses were owned by Hindu families, a few Memons of Shikarpur also had their houses in the canal township. The swimming areas were open to all. During summer the Sindh Canal encouraged Shikarpur residents to relax in the canal water and everyone lived in complete harmony. Sadly today nothing exists of this canal bank township. Shikarpur had three high schools, one college and a big hospital. Most of these services were provided by the Hindu community but a few notable Muslim families also contributed to philanthropic services in the education and health sector. The old structures were made of brick and wood, using teak wood logs as beams. It was after the colonial period that steel was available and used.

Soon after partition most of the Hindu residents of Shikarpur migrated to different parts of the world but mostly to India, leaving behind their furnished mansions and houses which were allotted to refugees arriving in Shikarpur.

this document are due to Irfan A. Syed, Mohammad Ali Qadri, Mahesh Kumar Jewani and Anila Naeem.

I also extend my thanks to my research supervisors (Prof. Emeritus Brian Goodey and Dr. Alan Reeve), colleagues and friends at Oxford Brookes University, Joint Centre for Urban Design and the Graduate Office, for providing support, co-operation, inspiration and guidance, at all times throughout the three years of this research experience.

My sincere and very special thanks to Ar. Hamir Soomro who opened the access to Shikarpoor for me by extending his generous hospitality and arranging for a comfortable stay throughout the duration of all my field works; in addition arranging for local support through his various connections and links in the city. I express my gratitude to Mr. Iftikhar Soomro and Mr. Omar Soomro for the use of Saat-Serai-Soomro and the staff/ caretakers of this rest house (Mr. Hadi Baksh Soomro, Deedar, Mazhar Ali and the cook Mumtaz) for providing to the comforts of my field work team during our stay/s in Shikarpoor. I would also like to extend my thanks to the various municipal/ district officers and residents of Shikarpoor with whose co-operation I have managed to document and gain insights of the city in so much detail. Among others I would like to specially mention Mr. Yasir Baloch, Mr. Naveed Alam Abro, Mr. Naseem Mughal, Mr. Agha Hussain M. Afridi and Mr. Attaullah Ahmadani.

And last but not the least, sincerest gratitude to my family for their unconditional support and encouragement at all times.

Author's Note

My interest and concern for historic environments is the result of a long and persistent passion for acquiring professional development in heritage conservation; first exposures in the subject area being through experiences as a student of architecture at Dawood College of Engineering and Technology, Karachi, and while pursuing a Master's Degree in Restoration and Preservation of Historical Monuments, at the Middle East Technical University, Ankara, Turkey. The disturbing state of apathy in Pakistan towards historic sites and built environments made it an inevitable choice to dedicate time and efforts towards developing heritage conservation practices, research and training in Pakistan; thus the association with Department of Architecture and Planning, N. E. D. University of Engineering and Technology, Karachi, since May 2000 has been a conscious choice. Here, in the capacity of a full time faculty member, possibilities are explored to evolve opportunities for filling the existing lacunae: introductory courses in heritage conservation within architecture curriculum - both at undergraduate and post-graduate levels, initiation of research based projects for documentation and restoration of historic properties/ areas - most significant contributions being the restoration of NED City Campus, the 'Karachi Historic Buildings Resurvey Project' and the 'Inventory/ Mapping of Shikarpoor Historic City'. These initiatives are launched through the 'Heritage Cell' (HC-DAPNED) which was established in 2006 as a research unit within the Department of Architecture and Planning, N.E.D. University.

Shikarpoor first caught my attention in 1999 when for the first time I was touring around Sindh with a group of students and ventured a short visit on insistence of a friend, who being a resident walked us through its fascinating streets during the two - three hour stay. In spite of being a whizzing experience, my camera flashed inconsistently and the images captured made a lasting impact. A number of short re-visits as study tours started to become a regular feature in the following years. Finally in 2006 when I received a scholarship to pursue PhD I already knew what I really want to research on. Since then it has been a long and passionate involvement with Shikarpoor; the revelations on its prestigious historical background, the discoveries of its hidden treasures, the agony of returning to these treasures and discovering that they exist no more, the understanding of the city's evolution and transformation as connecting factors link together, has all been a source of intrigue, excitement, enthusiasm; combined with a sense of frustration and anger on prevailing indifference. Although the trends of development, planning and management of the city today leave little to imagine a possible urban revival, but the insight gained through a systematic research on this important historic towns' unique urban fabric keeps the light of optimism still flickering. This humble contribution in the form a detailed inventory of historic places, mapped to give a comprehensive picture of the surviving historic environment of the city is thus a first step to achieve a few objectives: capture and record the fast disappearing historic environment; make a comprehensive database on cultural properties available in the form of a handy manual for city managers, planners and decision makers to enable them in taking decisions that

However, as the main requirement of the immigrants apart from accommodation was a sustained source of income and Shikarpur was never a manufacturing/ industry based centre in itself, they left for other towns in Pakistan. Sadly the vacated homes were disposed off and some were encroached by the neighbours.

Old Shikarpur was a town with highly developed civic facilities including underground drainage system. The photo pictures in the book clearly indicate that the allotted homes were never maintained. The encroachers and present occupants have destroyed this heritage. Shikarpur qualifies to be declared a protected heritage area and steps need to be taken to preserve whatever remains. Though I feel it is already quite late for this action.

My curiosity instinct makes me wonder why Prof. Anila Naeem who is not a Shikarpuri, should have undertaken this project, perhaps she has some way back connection with Shikarpur and that has kindled her passion to do so. One needs to compliment and thank her for this effort.

Introduction and Background

Shikarpoor in its Historic Perspective

The town of Shikarpoor in Upper Sindh, located at 68°49'19.18" E and 24° 44' 52.93" N, historically enjoyed great significance as a key trade centre due to its strategic geographic location; distinguishing it as the gate of Afghanistan, Khelat and the Khorasan. Early growth of the city under Afghan patronage encouraging Hindu traders to settle here, established the base of economic prosperity for Shikarpoor. This was further enhanced during colonial period, when Hindus were given added protection and privileges through the newly introduced legal and administrative systems. Thus Shikarpoor became a rare example of city in Sindh, having more than two-thirds of its population belonging to the Hindu faith. In addition, the city also had an influential community of Muslim/ Afghan landowners, having a strong hold on the working class masses. Being a pivot on the caravan trade route linking Afghanistan, India, Persia and Central Asia, the city represented a multicultural and multi-ethnic community. For a short period immediately after the annexation of Sindh by the British, Shikarpoor also became a center of colonial administration. The height of Shikarpoor's prosperity were 18th and 19th centuries; only after the post-Independence demographic changes the city went through a drastic decline, but the remnants of its unique historic past are still evident and surviving till present times.

Shikarpoor was established in 1617AD by Daoodpotras. During 18th and 19th century the city developed as Sindh's important hub of trade, commerce, banking, as well as political clout. Towards mid 18th century, Ahmed Shah Abdalee annexed Shikarpoor to the Kandahar State; his predecessor Taymur Shah encouraged Hindu merchants to settle here and carry-on trade through Afghanistan to Central Asia and India. Shikarpoor soon became one of the two cities of Sindh, having a Hindu majority (other being the port town of Karachi), in otherwise a Muslim dominated region. Shikarpoori merchants' trade and banking networks developed in far flung areas, bringing an international repute and fame for their town. Even though the city never enjoyed the distinction of being a capital or seat of administrative power, it had an influential control on economics and politics of the region, till Partition in 1947.

Shikarpoor came under possession of the Talpur Mirs (rulers) of Sindh in 1824 through a peaceful transaction between Afghans and Talpurs, however, the latter were required to pay an annual tribute. Irregularity in these payments caused frequent incursions on the town by the Afghans, claiming their arrears. This unstable situation of Shikarpoor, in otherwise quite controlled Sindhi domains, continued till 1834. From 1825 till 1836 the Sikh Ruler, Ranjit Singh had a keen desire to annex the town to his territories (Duarte, 1976; Khera, 1941). By mid 1830s, the prevailing political situation in the region resulted in an increased British interest in Sindh. In 1839-40, during the Afghan military campaign, the British troops used Shikarpoor as their military base, from where supplies and are supportive to the cause of heritage conservation; provide a resource for researchers, scholars and students interested in the history and traditional built environments of the region; and above all raise public awareness towards historic significance of the city and build a sense of pride among the residents and other stake holders. This inventory document is being published with the intention that this important information becomes accessible to all.

The compilation of this work has been an exhaustive exercise of five long years; venturing into the first field work with no maps available in hand and no clue on where to start. But as the determination became stronger the paths started to open up. The support extended by city residents and the overwhelming enthusiasm with which initial drafts of this compilation were received by not only the educated élite but also from the common man on the streets provides ample proof that in spite of the socio-economic degeneration and demographic changes, a sizable percentage of resident community in Shikarpoor still holds appreciation for the historic fabric and feels a sense of loss at the continuing pillage of the city's antiquarian values for the benefit of privileged few. It is hoped that this inventory compilation will become a source for instigating conservation initiatives that secure a safeguarded future for the unique urban environment of the city.

mostly of an informal nature, with isolated examples of buildings having architectural merit.

Shikarpoor's wealth and prosperity of bygone times is reflected through the remnants of its historic built environment; comprising of a residential fabric embellished with richly decorated 'havelis' (houses) and impressive public buildings built through charitable and philanthropic contributions from affluent community members. The form of the historic walled city is still well preserved, having structures in traditional architectural style, using timber, mud and brick. However, continuing demolitions of old structures and their replacing new constructions within walled city limits are rapidly transforming the city's traditional built environment.

The most significant building type is the residential 'haveli' or mansions, forming almost eighty percent of representative traditional built environment creating the essence and spirit of historic Shikarpoor. These became an expression of wealth for the merchants and landlords of Shikarpoor who employed master craftsmen to embellish and ornate their houses as fitting to their stature. This trend reached its height during latter 19th century, becoming a status symbol for influential and wealthy residents, both Hindus and Muslims, who took this form of symbolic expressionism to an extreme - asserting their status and position in society. The havelis were generally planned around a central lounge, opening onto a courtyard. Sometimes an arcaded verandah served as a buffer between the interior space and the open courtyard; creating deep shadows to keep the interior cool. Effective air circulation and ventilation was achieved through high ceilings, added to which was a row of ventilators or open-work fixed panels above the windows. The ground floor lounge area was usually a double height space, allowing a visual link with upper floor where a corridor running along the sides above the lounge served as circulation onto which all rooms on the upper floor opened. The interiors had rich decorations, including colorful geometric patterns used on cement flooring, carved timber doors and cupboards, marble fire places, timber and glass decorations on ceilings, etc. The exterior façades also have extensive decorative features contributing to the unique characteristic of Shikarpoor's historic fabric. These include extensively carved doors, roundels, colonnaded or arcaded porticos or verandahs, timber carved screens in wall openings/ balconies, brackets supporting projecting upper floors and many other forms of decorations using timber, wrought/ cast iron metalwork and stucco. The ornamentation includes figurative, floral and geometric motifs, reflecting upon the religious ideology of the inhabitants. The houses of Hindus had iconographic representations from their religious mythology, whereas those of Muslim residents made use of extensive geometric and floral motifs; both co-existing with a balanced and harmonic presence.

Recognizing its importance as an important historic town, the Department of Culture, Government of Sindh, through a notification in September 1998 declared 'Shikarpoor Historic Town', a protected heritage under the 'Sindh Cultural Heritage Preservation Act 1994'. It has also been included in the 2008 and 2010 World Monuments Watch List of 100 Most Endangered Sites. But these mere other provisions were ensured for sustenance of their army. Finally, Shikarpoor became part of the British Empire with the conquest of Sindh in 1843.

During the first two decades of British rule, Shikarpoor was seen as an important city; developed as the District Headquarter and a Military Cantonment. But post 1860s, the focus gradually shifted to Sukkur (in the south) and Jacobabad (in the north), which superseded Shikarpoor as administrative and military base respectively. The Imperial Gazetteer of India (1908) indicates 'construction of the North-Western Railway and its extension to Quetta' as the cause for Shikarpoor's loss of commercial importance. The latter 19th century developments in Sindh resulted in a decline of caravan trade activities that used Shikarpoor as a base. Communication networks shifted to railways (introduced in Sindh during 1858-61) and sea transportation (Karachi port developed in 1870s); redefining the trade hub for Sindh and its modus operandi. But Markovits is of the opinion that the 'partition of 1947 ...[resulting in] massive exodus of Shikarpuri Hindus towards Bombay and other parts of India, ...[was] the death knell of a merchant community which, throughout the vicissitudes of a chequered history, always showed a capacity to rebound and to recreate itself' (Markovits, 2000 p.108). Indo-Pak Partition resulted in mass exodus of Hindu population, changing completely the socio-economic and demographic character of Shikarpoor. The first immigrants to the city during Partition included middle class educated families, but these seem to have moved on to larger cities for better education and job opportunities. The recent migrations into the city are mostly from adjoining rural areas, which explains the post 1980s – 90s transformation of the town from the 'commercial, civil and urban lines' to 'rural, feudal and tribal lines' (Baloch, 2007).

Shikarpoor was originally a walled city having a circumference of 3800 yards, having eight gates, guarded at all times: activities of trade caravans remained outside the walled limits. The historic core within walled limits has narrow winding streets and alleys, many of which terminate as dead-end lanes; the original layout being well preserved, even today can accommodate only pedestrian traffic. The colonial period extensions of the city developed on the east (cantonment areas) and south (administrative offices) of the walled city area. The historic fabric of Shikarpoor is represented by traditional constructions in timber, mud and brick. However, this is rapidly changing and new constructions in cement concrete are increasingly replacing the traditional buildings. The famed Dhak (Covered) Bazaar of Shikarpoor cuts across the centre of the walled city area along N-S axis. A comparison of 1985-86 survey map and a 1915 historic map of Shikarpoor with the city's present satellite image shows minimal growth beyond its colonial period extensions. However, densification of these later period built-up areas can be observed. Presently Shikarpoor, having a population of 0.13 million (census 1998), is considered as a medium sized, tertiary level town of Sindh on the basis of its urban facilities. The town has easy access by road and railway, however, being a small city there are no facilities of accommodation, with suitable international standards for tourists/ visitors. Expansion of city limits beyond walled city being minimal, the present municipality limits remain more or less the same as in colonial times. Developments in peripheral areas are its merits. These are then fed into a database software to produce the final inventory forms.

The methodology adopted for undertaking this research based documentation involves several stages including; a literature review of secondary sources to help understand the historical background of Shikarpoor; focusing primarily on identifying different periods of history, period influences on built fabric, stages of development or growth pattern and identifying the limits of historic core and extents of municipal limits. Having an informed approach on the historical background ensured that contributions from different periods were given due importance and their representative cases identified in the listing process. The literature review and other sources also provided the opportunity of incorporating the lost historic fabric as part of the documentation process. Information on historic properties that do not exist anymore became available through residents (photographs of a few were also provided from personal archives), which on authentication have been incorporated in the inventory document. In addition, more than one hundred and fifty buildings have also been demolished since 2007 when the first inventory survey was undertaken. All these demolished properties for which information was available are retained in the inventory document to serve as a historic record.

Maps from different periods used for this research became an important resource to gain an insight to the state of preservation or destruction of natural resources and open spaces. The methodology includes identification of city's open spaces and natural resources, and incorporating them as part of the listing process. This gives a holistic picture of built-up areas in relation to open spaces or natural resources, allowing possible use of this documentation to address issues of sustainability, through an approach of more efficient integrated planning process.

The field survey for Shikarpoor was initiated without having any detailed maps available before hand. But during the survey sources were identified from where useful base maps were acquired. The maps incorporated in developing the comprehensive mapping and used as base information include; detailed survey sheets of only the historic core (undated; scale 1 inch = 80 feet) (1:960) obtained from city survey records revenue office, a 1:10,000 scale survey map dating 1986 obtained from Survey of Pakistan, a historic map of 1915 and the satellite image of the city. Depending on the availability of different level of details for different areas of the city, the methodology for field work was derived. The city's municipality limits thus formed three different zones. The first zone includes entire area within walled city limits and its immediate extension eastwards; covered in detailed survey sheets (1 inch = 80 feet) and surveyed on foot, street by street, identifying and marking all properties befitting the pre-defined listing criteria. The second zone covered an area for which information on plot divisions and numbers was briefly available only from the 1915 map, with no updated maps. The character of this zone was vehicle oriented, thus survey was undertaken by driving through major roads and identifying properties. The third zone covered areas beyond the extents of 1915 map; their only source of information being the 1986 survey plan (1:10,000). The approach of survey in notifications have not proved sufficient to curb the pace of destruction resulting in loss of a unique historic environment.

The Inventory Documentation of Shikarpoor's Historic Places

The official notification of Shikarpoor was meant to provide legal protection to the city's historic fabric; however, this proved insufficient due to a lack of property specific listing appended to the order. Unchecked demolition of historic structures is thus a common occurrence, resulting in gradual disappearance of the traditional built environment.

Responding to an alarmingly high demolition rate of historic buildings (havelis) in Shikarpoor, this inventory documentation and mapping of the entire city was undertaken as a self initiated effort of the author through the Heritage Cell – DAPNED in 2007, with the intention of providing a useful tool for developing awareness among all stake holders towards the importance of safeguarding the unique built environment, and also facilitate to develop an understanding of the characteristic features of built environment that need to be safeguarded. The document provides a comprehensive database that not only serves the purpose of identification and mapping of each property, but goes a step further in defining the parameters of merit and the features that contribute to the built environment. It also includes brief information on the state of conservation of identified properties giving an idea on the urgency of intervention required for ensuring their survival.

• Criteria for Listing and Methodology

To assess historical and cultural built form traditions, it is important to develop a systematic documentation to be used as a tool for analysis, management and implementation. The adopted methodology for documentation of Shikarpoor's historic places includes use of available resources and information, building upon it through a methodical recording of primary data from field surveys; using a pre-designed 'Core Data Index Form' (CDIF) for mapping and inventory listing of heritage properties. This CDIF was developed as part of a research project undertaken by HC-DAPNED in collaboration with the Department of Culture, GoS, through which a 'criteria for listing' was submitted, and after review by the Heritage Advisory Committee was endorsed as the approved criteria for listing of heritage properties in Sindh.

The CDIF is designed to capture data that substantially covers various aspects and complexity of historic traditions, and the importance of fragile natural and environmental resources. The theoretical base for developing this is derived from existing international methods and principles of inventory documentation and heritage recording; but in addition it includes data considered essential for addressing the lack of existing information on historic towns within the context of Pakistan. The basic factual information collected for each surveyed property including its physical condition and usage is compiled and evaluated for defining understand its essence and take decisions accordingly; not compromising on the individuality of each case.

The graded grouping can facilitate development of general guidelines, rules, regulations and policies separately for specific group, including incentives for property owners encouraging better maintenance and guidelines on extent of allowable changes inside/ outside/ around the buildings. For higher degree value groups more restrictive regulations on changes and repairs should be formulated, whereas for lower degree value groups these can be more flexible. This sieving of value based groups can also be useful for management and conservation planning objectives.

Through an analytical correlation of data defining present usage and physical condition, the threat level to each property is determined. All enlisted properties are classified under one of the three groups; high degree threat (HDT), second degree threat (SDT) and good state of condition (GSC). 'High degree threat' is given to properties being fifty percent or more vacant, and/ or having 'partially demolished', 'façade only' or 'highly deteriorated' physical condition; thus identified as requiring urgent attention and immediate preventive measures. Second degree threat group includes partially maintained properties and good state of condition identifies well maintained properties. Tabulated version of this data is provided in appendix C for ease of identification.

The value based grouping and identified threat levels generate useful data to help prioritize financial support and urgency of actions for focused conservation initiatives, especially for properties in higher degree value group and under high degree threat.

Other analytical values included in inventory forms facilitate in understanding exact parameters of merit and values for each property identifying the reasons for their listing. In addition the parameter of 'locational value' and its detailed sub-categories is based on a hierarchical value system in respect to the property's location in the urban context. For the case of Shikarpoor the character of street circulation pattern is such that in addition to vehicular access roads (Circular Road, Dadwai Road, Karan Gate Road, Sidik Mari Road, Nausharo Daro Road, Wadhu Market Road) some of the pedestrian streets are also considered to be the 'main roads' of the city. These include the main Bazaar street from Lakhi Dar end to Stuart Gunj Bazaaar end and the entire stretch of Churigar and Boot Bazaar; the two main commercial arteries and most populated pedestrian streets of Shikarpoor city. Entries of the inventory layout are explained in the image; followed by some explanatory notes describing the various connotations used in the form.

these areas was spot listing of properties having historic significance, either mentioned in the available maps or identified by residents.

• The Format and Connotations of Inventory Forms

The inventory of Shikarpoor's historic properties includes 1203 entries in all; including 1175 buildings, 12 open spaces and 16 urban elements. These are compiled and mapped in eight sections, in accordance with the administrative division of the city's union councils. The catalogue includes complete key maps identifying location of each enlistment and giving an overall contextual understanding of the entire city and its environs. Each one of the 1203 properties has a separate inventory form that gives comprehensive information related to that particular entry, including pictures and a location map along with analytical information enabling the understanding for significance and values attached to that specific case. In response to the need for creating awareness and level of education regarding listed properties the format of developed inventory form is kept simple and user friendly, so that the document can serve as a guide and manual for managers, decision makers, researchers or others wishing to gain knowledge of the listed heritage. The second volume includes appendices; the first appendix gives a comparison of demolished buildings in the record with the new constructions that replace them; giving a clear picture on the change in architectural vocabulary and the lack of aesthetic values/ merits in the new constructions. The rest of the appendices include tabulated version of the database, first sorted according to the serial number sequence of the unique ID; then sorted according to the degree of value importance and lastly according to the threat level. These tabulated appendices are added for ease of users to be able to easily extract information most pertinent to management and policy making.

The two important analytical outputs included in the final inventory form are the 'value based' grouping and identification of 'threat level'. The properties are graded according to their degree of value. The method uses parameters of merit for evaluation of each property, according to which they are placed in one of the four value groups, each having its own defined range of numeric values:

1st Degree Value (90 -150 points)
2nd Degree Value (70 – 89 points)
3rd Degree Value (50 – 69 points)
4th Degree Value (20 – 49 points)

This value-based grouping is applied only on buildings included in the heritage inventory list; open spaces and urban elements are excluded from the process due to their different nature and lesser numbers. This value-based grading allows grouping of similar properties in terms of architectural quality and significance value; each having specified range of value points, but each property within the group has differing set of merit parameters. This allows for an enhanced evaluation of each property rather than restrictive pre-formed and generalized groups. This value driven analytical method allows for an in-depth understanding of property values, making the inventory a self explanatory tool for professionals, managers, administrators and others associated with individual property to

Unique Numeric ID

Main Picture

This covers the complete image of the property. For cases with more than one façade the more important or front face is selected for this image.

Name/s

includes all available information on present or older names of the property; known through inscriptions, historic maps, gazetteers or official records/ documents and oral sources.

Date of Construction

(if known from inscription on building or authentic published source)

Complete Address

including plot no., street name, locality.

Other References

Including enlistment number (if available), previous listing/s or any other designation or references.

Number of storeys

(as in original + later added or mezzanine floor shown separately)

Original Building Type

(Original specific usage if known)

Present Usage

Ground Floor
First Floor
Second Floor
Third Floor

Includes floor-wise usage as recorded at time of survey; indicating combination of uses (if any) at each level and the extent of use.

Ownership

either government (provincial/ federal) or private (single/ multiple) or trust

Occupancy

owned/ rented/ pagri

Parameters of Merit:

These include evaluative information specific to property including its

- Architectural merits
- Environmental / Natural values
- Historic significance and associations
- Group value
- Other values of primary significance
- Locational Value

These are developed from a list of pre-defined entries in the CDIF. Each property has its own set of parameters of merit, in accordance with the values attached to it. The sum of numeric points assigned to various parameters adds up to define the 'Degree of Value' group for specific property.

Present Status

D/ PD/ HD/ FO/ PM/ WM

Gives the state of conservation; i.e. physical condition in terms of its integrity at the time of survey.

Threat Level

HDT/ SDT/ GSC

Indicates the urgency of conservation measures

Alteration

Major or Minor

Prominent Architectural / Landscaping Features

Includes external architectural features for buildings and enhancing landscaping elements in case of open spaces; listed specifically for each property to clearly identify the tangible values.

& GPS POINTS

The map marks the property in reference to its immediate surroundings. Hatched areas within property boundary indicate open spaces; whereas built-up areas are shown with solid color.

Numerics in this area refer to the degree of value assigned to each property after an analytical review.

The total points of value which can be any figure within the range assigned for each value based group. This being property specific, varies for different properties within the same value group.

Pictures of Details

These cover the different features or views of the property. If any changes have happened to the property after the first field survey in 2007, and clearly visible in 2011 pictures, these are identified by the year so as to record the transformation.

All images used in the document are dated from 2007-08 survey, unless otherwise mentioned.

PARAMETERS OF MERIT

i. Architectural interest includes four aspects:

- External architectural features including decorations, ornamentation and details, that contribute towards the character and quality of the urban fabric. Interior features of value vis-à-vis traditional interior decorations are not taken into consideration as these remain beyond the scope of urban ensembles. The only exception being the courtyard/ sehn, as it is identifiable from outside due to a low wall or placement of building mass on the plot parcel; in turn contributing to the streetscape.
- Plan typology includes buildings having 'unique' or 'typical' traditional plans, having particular relationship between plot-parcel, street and building masses; either repeating in a distinctive pattern, or unique and of interest as an exceptional case. Buildings considered have minimum or no alterations in terms of additions or removals.
- Unique craftsmanship includes buildings using traditional materials and crafts; such as elaborate carvings on stone, timber, brick, wrought/ cast iron details, timber screens, stucco decorations, traditional tile work, sculpture; representing high quality contributions of master craftsmen. This aspect has a qualitative judgment, as similar features of lower degree craftsmanship are not considered.
- Record of variation in construction materials and building technology includes properties having traditional construction materials, no longer in common use for new constructions. Examples showing unique or innovative building technology are also included for this value.

ii. Environmental/ Natural asset includes features/elements contributing to the character or setting of a place (such as riverbanks, canals, agricultural fields, water reservoir, grazing fields, parks, public gardens, urban squares); listed under two subgroups:

- Open spaces having emerged as an expression of the urban cultural pattern including congregation spaces for special occasions/ festivals, informal open areas of social interaction within a neighbourhood, public squares or piazzas, promenades, and other similar features.
- Open spaces that contribute to the ecology of the area or contribute towards its environmental quality; including natural reserves, woodlands, marshlands, orchards, agricultural fields, irrigation canals, and other similar features.

iii. Historic interest includes three aspects:

- Social, cultural and economic values represented by almost all historic buildings built in a particular time. If continuously in use, they reflect upon changes taking place with time, in trends for use, materials, forms of decoration, etc., indicating socio-economic and cultural transformations in the society, its living traditions and its growth or degeneration.
- Military history represented by places that might have lost their original use, but still exist either as redundant or reused properties.
- Innovation in technology or engineering includes extraordinary works or examples having brought a breakthrough in existing practices, introducing new developments or daring experimentation (e.g. works of extraordinary engineering, use of new construction technology, innovative use of old or new buildings materials). Modern icons of change in architectural trends are also considered.

iv. Historical association of property or place with:

- Important personality being a residence, birth place, place of death, or place of any other important incident in the life of a national or local hero.
- An event considered as part of the nations' historical development or in the case of local history a major event given importance in the history of that particular place;
- Or first of its type, tradition or technology contributing towards making of local or national history, having especial significance in historical developments of a particular trend, in regional or local context.

v. Group value identifying properties not having singular importance but contribute towards the overall character of the urban fabric, in terms of scale, proportions and essence of the historic area as a group or a cluster.

vi. Other additional aspects of merit enhancing value or significance of any property include; landmark value of well know building or place, public eminence of an amenity building, or a rare surviving example of past tradition, or a unique building type. This is an open ended field allowing inclusion of new discoveries or unknown aspects of places. Through this exceptional additional quality the total numeric value is enhanced, thus systematically elevating the property to a higher degree value group.

LOCATIONAL VALUE evaluates the property's placement in the context of city's circulation/ hierarchy; based on its contribution to the fabric in terms of visibility, accessibility impact on perception of visitors/ users. Sub-categories for this aspect are firstly based on plot-parcels and then on street patterns and massing/ placement of built up areas on the plot. Three main categories identified here include:

- Properties having an independent compound with one or more structures. Given value is based on visual permeability and level of public access to the open spaces within the compound. Public access spaces have higher numeric value than those for private use only. Similarly the visibility of structure/ open spaces from the street or main road is considered as a higher contributor to the urban fabric than those enclosed within high and visibly impermeable walls.
- Properties with façades on streets/ roads having the same plot line and building line. Values assigned are based on the number of façade/s contributing directly to the street/ road. Properties on corner location with three façades are given highest value, followed by those with two, and lastly one façade on street/ roads. Furthermore, city level circulation hierarchy is the other determinant, with buildings placed on main roads being more visible, given a higher value than those located on secondary streets.
- Properties located on the outskirts or periphery of the city or outside historic core including isolated monuments or places of significance, such as historic graveyards, shrines, tombs, caravanserais, mostly located near the highways or main approach roads or accessible through secondary roads. These being important and well known landmarks are given a higher degree value as they serve as anchor points to the city's periphery. (Naeem, 2009)

FUNCTIONAL TYPE

Based on original function (irrespective of usage at the time of listing) properties are categorized in eleven pre-defined major groups. Each of these function-based broader categories include a range of exact uses The change in function over the properties' life span is documented the details under present usage.

I. Public monuments/ civic amenity/ public utilities
II. Educational/ Institutional
III. Religious/ Worship
IV. Health/ Welfare
V. Commercial
VI. Industrial
VII. Agricultural
VIII. Military
IX. Residential
X. Open spaces/ Natural sites
XI. Urban elements

(Naeem, 2009)

PHYSICAL CONDITION

Integrity of building includes following pre-defined categories:

- Demolished (D): Further classification with respect to present state on plot, i.e. vacant, under construction or new construction (source of information on buildings no longer existing is either through historic maps, gazetteers, books, old photographs or previous listing).
- Partially demolished (PD): Having a collapsed portion of building façade, or partly/ completely collapsed roof or upper floor.
- Façade only (FO): Having only external shell still intact; entire interior being completely demolished/ collapsed.
- Highly deteriorated (HD): Structurally intact properties, having a high degree of disintegrated architectural elements (including missing door/ window shutters, carving panels, timber/ stone decorations), or having suffered various forms of vandalism.
- Partly maintained (PM): Existing in a liveable condition, but having undergone changes affecting their external appearance, either due to haphazard alterations or lack of regular maintenance and repair works.
- Well maintained (WM): Having homogenous outer appearance, with no alterations that damage or deface the external façades.

ALTERATIONS

Major - include buildings having the following form of changes:

- Mass added (i.e. floor, room or any other structural mass added to the building - directly adding dead loads on the existing structural system).
- Mass attached (a staircase, an extension or other such additions - adding transverse loads to the existing structural system).
- Mass added on the lot i.e. added structures on the plot's open spaces; not having any impact on the structural system but only affects built-up/ open area ratios, and the overall profile of site, especially if such additions have massive proportions.
- Mass removed i.e. any parts or portions that have been removed or demolished; their prior existence being identifiable only through either the layout or traces on site or known through old photographs.

Minor - include a range of changes in material finishes and/ or architectural features (eg. original design or materials of doors, windows, balconies, or addition of air-conditioning units/ exhaust fans, or addition of grills/ shutters/ jalis, change in original external color, external cladding with new materials such as tiles or cement plaster).

(Naeem, 2009)

• Usability of the Inventory Manual

Comprehensive inventories are essential for developing better understanding of the 'wider historical, social and architectural contexts' of any place; and considered indispensable not only for 'definition, interpretation, education, protection, conservation, planning, rehabilitation and heritage management' (CoE, 2001), but also as an effective tool for creating public awareness and inculcating support for their legislative protection.

The practical applicability and usability of this inventory document is primarily for those responsible for monitoring and administration; especially when these have acquired official listing status. It can thus be used as a source of reference to facilitate decision making on listed heritage properties. In Shikarpoor, however, a lack of existing administrative unit responsible for heritage management makes practical applicability rather challenging. The benefit gained from a directional, self guiding and self explanatory format of the inventory process and its final output is that professionals, administrators and other users or beneficiaries would be able to understand the essence of the exercise and be able to take initiatives without entirely depending on experts in the field, overcoming to a certain degree the hurdles faced due to a lack of trained heritage conservation professionals presently working in the region. Availability of this heritage inventory database provides an opportunity for progressive and well directed actions.
